

2018 Sept Southbank Centre

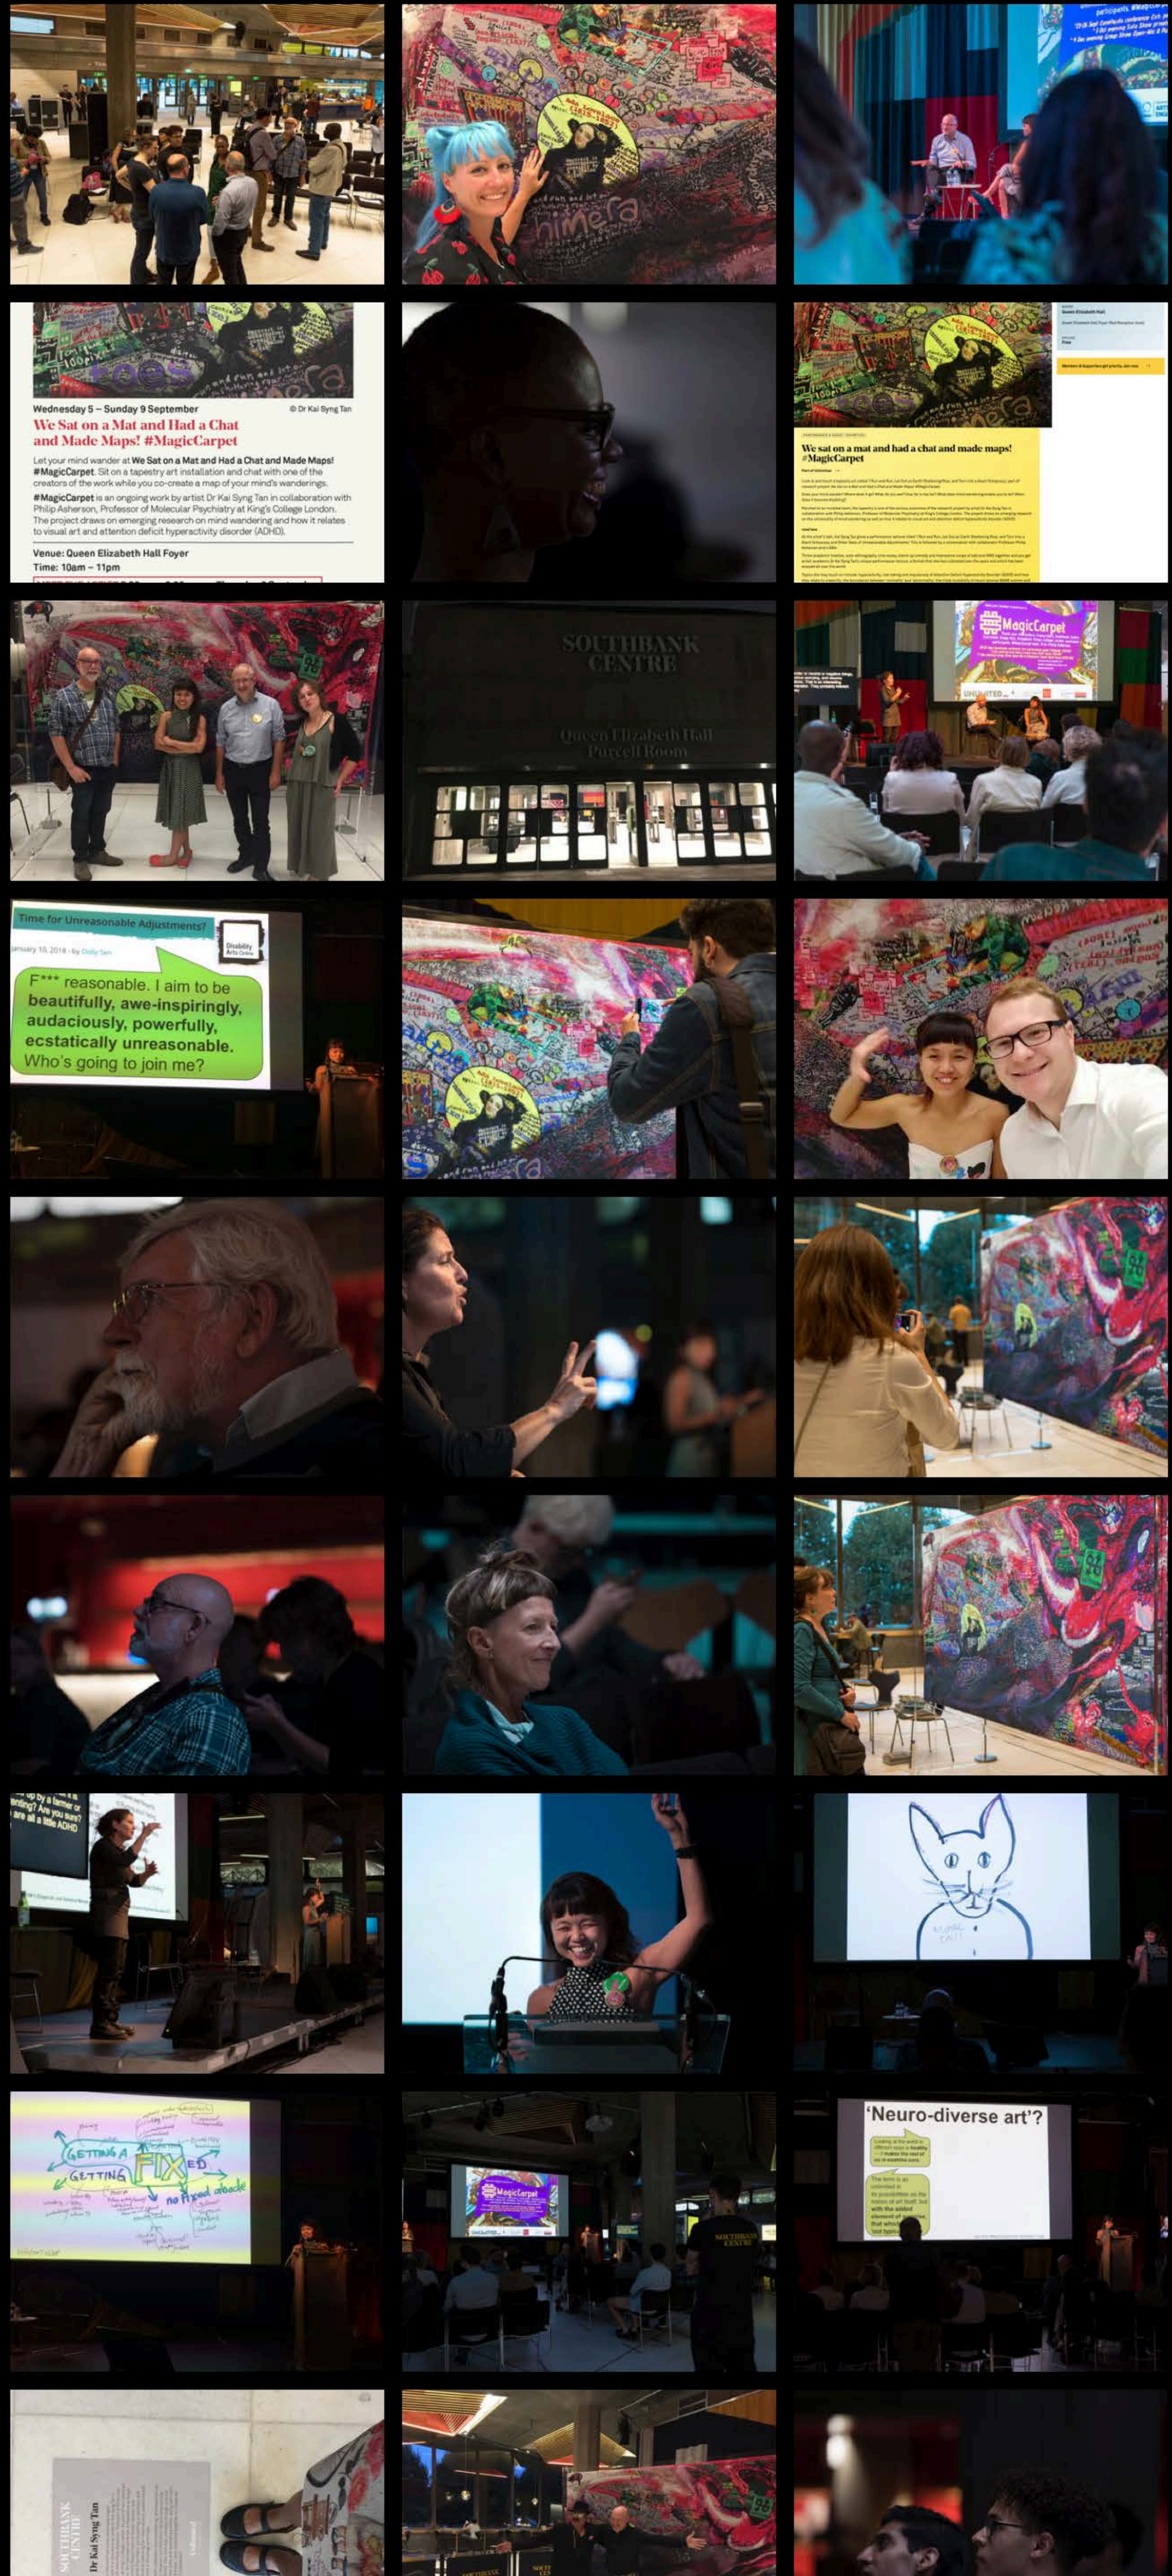

The #MagicCarpet made a noisy entry at the Unlimited Festival, Queen Elizabeth Hall Foyer, Southbank Centre. There was a performance-lecture by Kai followed by chat with Professor Philip Asherson: Thursday 6th of September 17:30-18:30. There was also a tapestry art installation: Wednesday 5th - Sunday 9th of September, which was accompanied by an audio description by Jennie Elbourne. Around 700 people interacted with the work, and 80 people came for the performance-lecture, during which Professor Philip Asherson also gave a short presentation on ADHD. The gallery consists of photographs by Studio Maba, Kai and Alessandra Cianetti. Please credit #MagicCarpet by Kai Syng Tan at the Southbank Centre 2018. For higher-res images and specific credit please email us magiccarpet@kaisyngtan.com

Feedback for the performance-lecture, chat & exhibition:

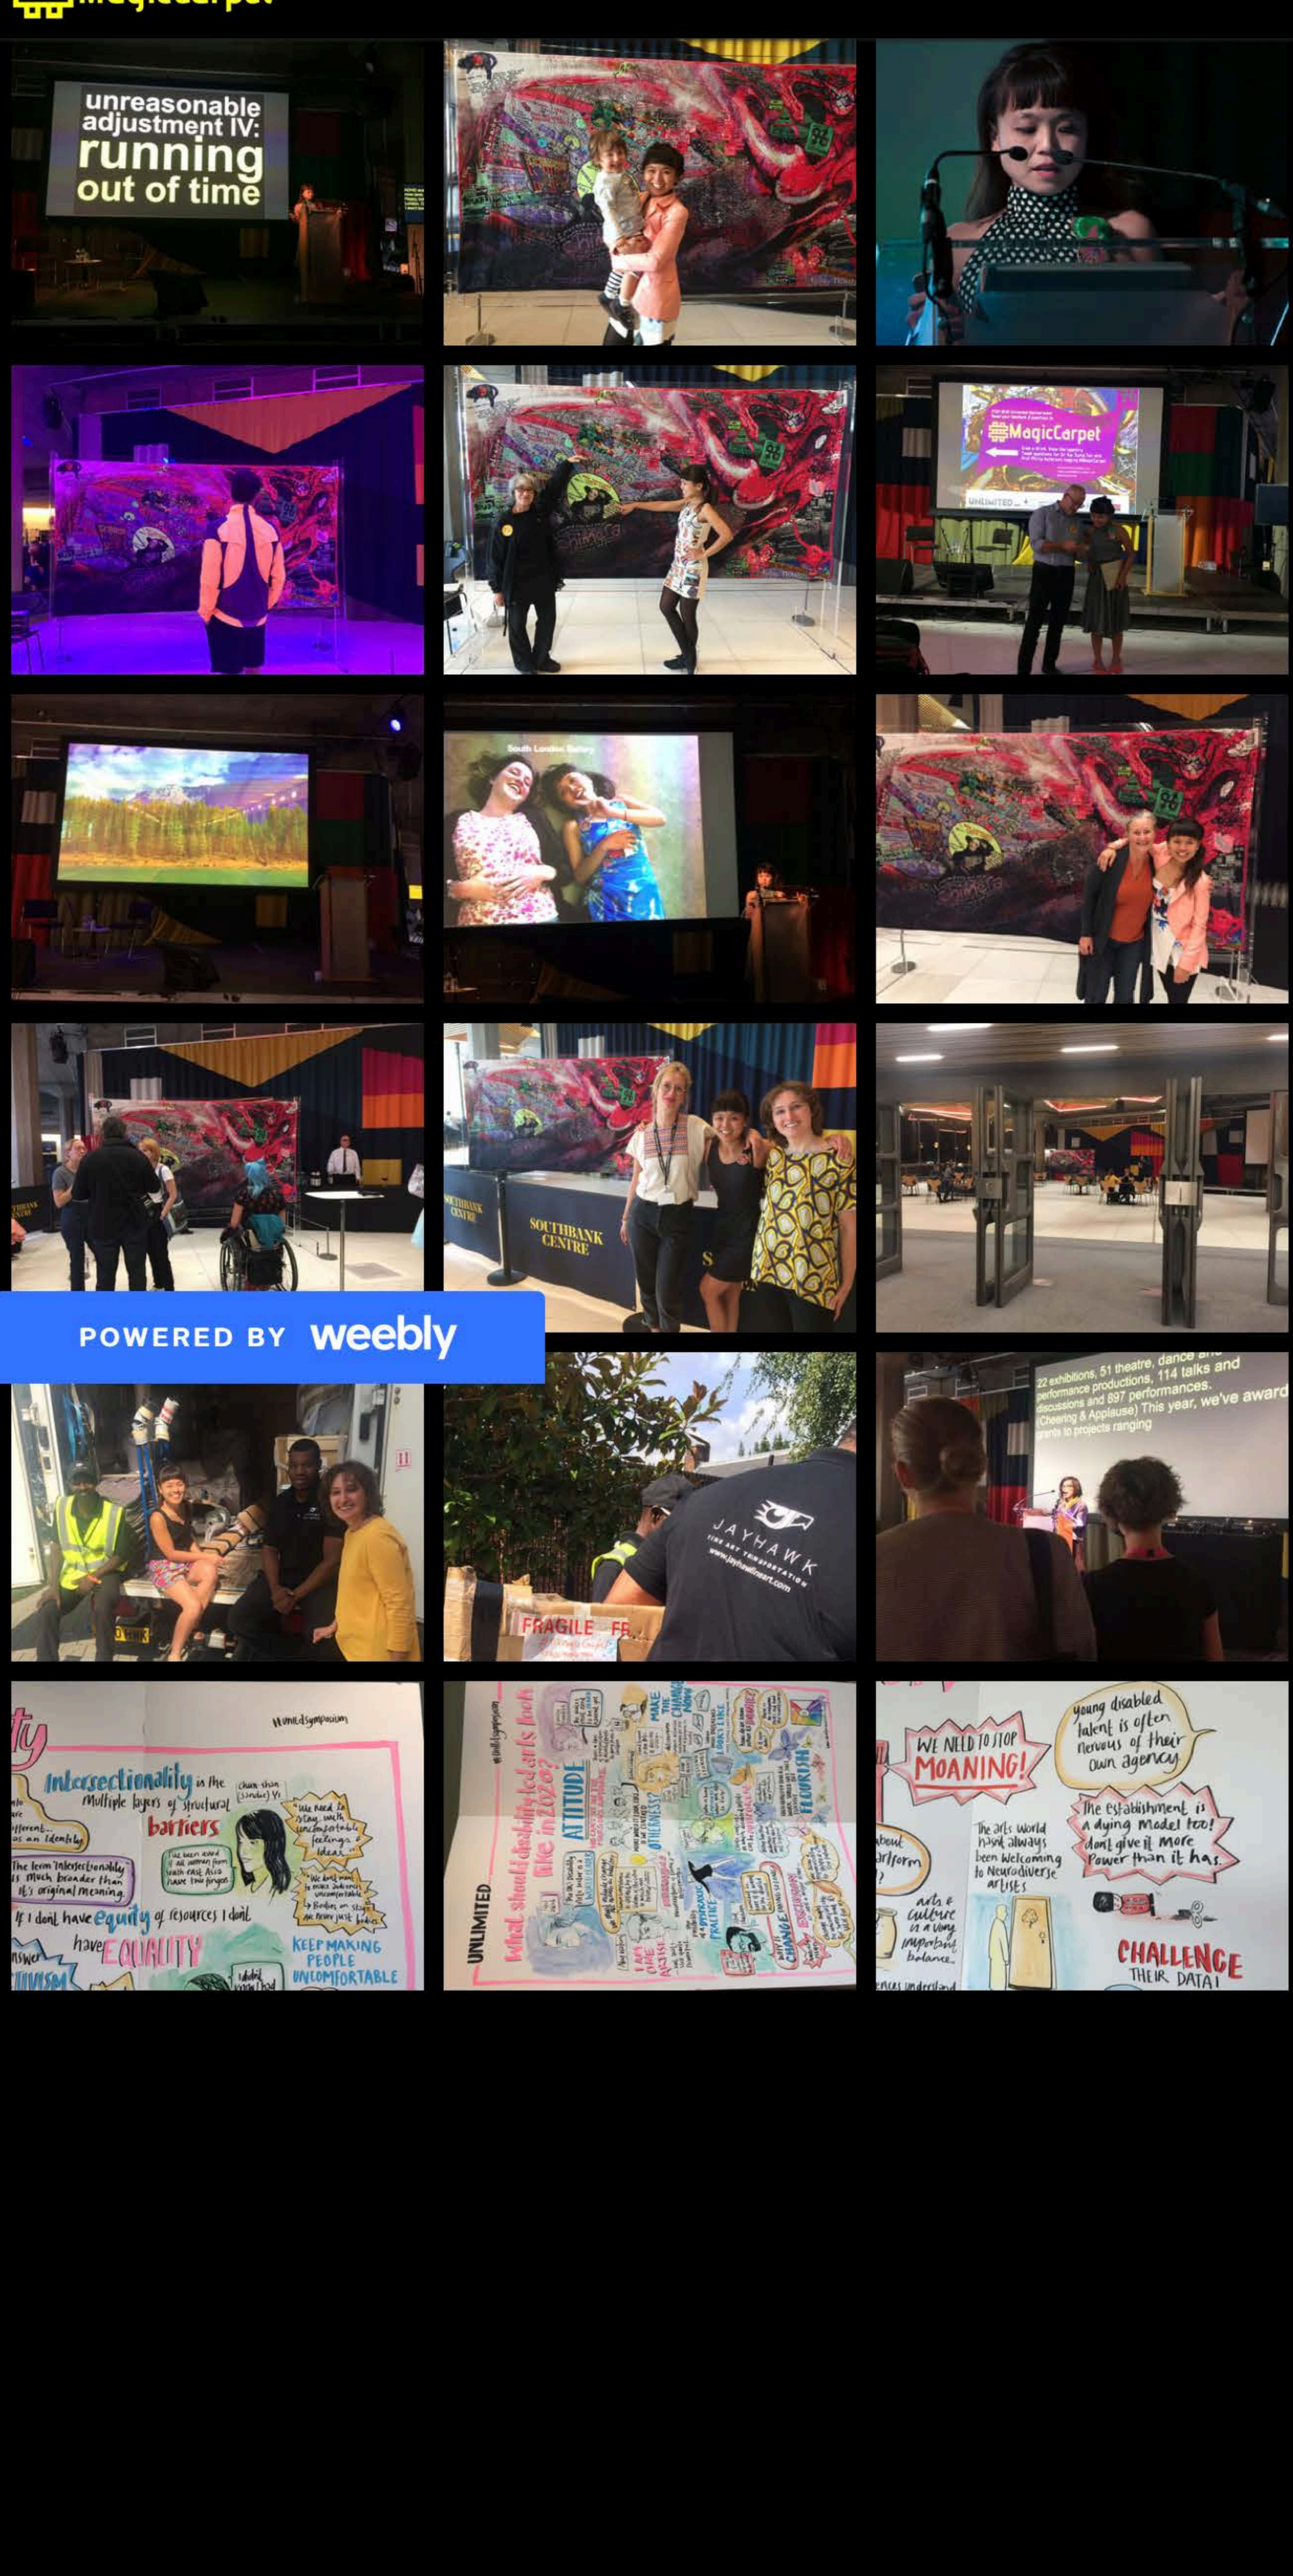

'Again, a thought provoking evening and I've since been mulling over how society is set up, what the rules are, why they are there and what happens if any of us, from those at the end of the spectrum or even those in the middle, decide they are not going to conform. I'm also going to give my mind permission to wander a bit more, probably not when someone is paying me to do my job!' - Dr Kathy Barrett, University Lead for Research Staff Development, Centre for Research Staff Development, King's College London

'Just a belated note to say how much I enjoyed the talk at the Southbank, thank you for the invitation! You should do a TED talk!!' - CHRIS BAKER, Four Communications

MagicCarpet

POWERED BY weebly