'It was something that was going to happen...':
the experiences of older involuntarily childless men.

Ageing and childlessness

- Older childless adults: ‘...rendered invisible in social science literature.’ (Dykstra and Hagestad 2007: p. 1275).
- Survey data indicates older childless adults have an increased risk of loneliness, social, isolation, depression, and ill health (Dykstra and Hagestad, 2007).
- Formerly married childless men showed poorer physical health, excessive drinking and smoking, depression, and sleeping difficulties than men with partners (Kendig et al, 2007).

The Sample

- 14 men were interviewed: 27 semi-structured interviews in total
- Aged between 49 – 82
- 2 non-heterosexual, 12 heterosexual
- 7 single (5 solo living including 2 widowers ; 1 lodged; 1 in family home)
- 7 in relationships (6 living together; 1 LAT)
- 13 were White-British; 1 Anglo-Celtic Australian
- 6 drew pensions (4 working part-time)
- 3 were seeking work (1 unregistered); 1 DLA
- 3 full time employment; 1 not seeking employment

Social context

Harry (70): 'I always imagined I would have children.'

Raymond (70): 'I think from about like fifteen years old I knew I was gay, so in my mind even then I knew I would never get married. So I suppose I didn't even think too much about children because you don't get married them days you didn't have children.'

David (60): 'I just naturally, in growing up, rather assumed I would leave school, do university, get a job, get married, and have a family'

Post-transitional: awareness

Harry: 'I'm never going to be able to say this is my grandson am I?'

Martin: 'It's something I will never stop regretting. You know, it won't go away.'

Raymond: 'I don't want people saying, "Oh, he's a bit of a paedophile, this one, looking at the kids." You know?'

Edward: 'It is noticeable that friends who have children drift away; they get into other circles of other friends who've got children and that's been very marked.'

Thank you for listening.
